A CONVERSATION WITH CLARISSA WARD & DAVID ROHDE

Clarissa Ward is CNN's multi-award winning chief international correspondent based in London. She has spent nearly two decades reporting from front lines in Syria, Iraq, Afghanistan, Egypt and Ukraine for CNN, ABC, CBS and Fox News. Ward is the recipient of multiple awards for her journalism, including nine Emmy Awards, two George Foster Peabody Awards, three Alfred I. duPont-Columbia Awards, two Edward R. Murrow Awards and a George Polk Award. She is the author of "On All Fronts: The Education of a Journalist," which details her singular career as a conflict reporter.

Known for her in-depth investigations and high-profile assignments, Ward was on the ground in Ukraine as Russia began its invasion in February 2022 and has since spent more than five months crisscrossing the country to cover the war. Her reporting from Ukraine has contributed to recent prestigious award wins for CNN including a duPont Award and Royal Television Society (RTS) Award.

She reported extensively from Afghanistan on life under Taliban control, a story she covered live on the streets of the capital as it played out in August 2021. Ward graduated with distinction from Yale University, and in 2013 received an Honorary Doctor of Letters degree from Middlebury College in Vermont. She speaks fluent French and Italian, conversational Russian, Arabic and Spanish and basic Mandarin.

David Rohde, senior executive editor, national security, at NBC News, returns to the Deadline Club's annual Awards Dinner to lead the evening's featured conversation with Ward. At last year's dinner, Rohde interviewed Nobel Laureate Maria Ressa.

Rohde took up his new post at NBC News this week after six years at The New Yorker, where he was executive editor of its digital operation. He is a former reporter for Reuters, The New York Times, and The Christian Science Monitor. He was awarded a Pulitzer Prize for international reporting, in 1996, for stories that helped expose the Srebrenica massacre during the war in Bosnia. In 2009, he shared a Pulitzer with a team of Times reporters for coverage of Afghanistan and Pakistan.

Rohde is the author of several books, including, "In Deep: The F.B.I., the C.I.A., and the Truth About America's 'Deep State,'" and "A Rope and a Prayer: The Story of a Kidnapping," which he co-wrote with his wife, Kristen Mulvihill, about being seized by the Taliban in 2008 and held for seven months before managing to escape.

A native of Maine and a graduate of Brown University, he and his wife live in New York with their two daughters.

MEET THE SCHOLARS

The Deadline Club presents $2,500 scholarships to six remarkable young journalists

Edward Franco is a sophomore at New York University, where he's majoring in journalism and social-cultural analysis with a focus on broadcasting. He is currently studying abroad at NYU Florence in Italy, where he's focusing on reporting on local issues. He was a student reporter for The SPJ News during MediaFest22 and was the video director for Washington Square News, NYU's independent newspaper. He is proud to be a Colombian American who hopes to continue in a career as a television reporter covering politics, education, and transportation.

Elliot Heath is a senior at Townsend Harris High School in Queens. He will be attending Columbia University with an intended double major in English and Film Studies. As an editor-in-chief of his school newspaper, The Classic, he has helped report on sexual misconduct policies within DOE public schools. Elliot has been a firm advocate for student press freedom, lobbying in Albany for the passage of the Student Journalist Free Speech Act. He is also vice president of the Student Advisory Board at Press Pass NYC, an organization that seeks to promote student-run journalism programs in public schools. Elliot hopes to pursue a career in documentary filmmaking.

Aria Young is an incoming senior at New York University. She interned at NBC Nightly News with Lester Holt, where she pitched stories and assisted producers. At NYU, she is the news director of WNYU 89.1 FM Radio, where she manages student news programs. Aria is also a videographer for Washington Square News. Her narrative audio story "What's In A Name" was the grand-prize winner of the 2022 NPR College Podcast Challenge. As a journalist, she is drawn to stories about identity, inclusion, and belonging. She is pursuing a career in multimedia journalism and documentary filmmaking.

Liset Cruz is a student at Columbia University's Graduate School of Journalism, where she is completing a Master of Science degree with a specialization at the Toni Stabile Center for Investigative Journalism. She's a bilingual Mexican-American journalist committed to covering underserved communities. Before coming to New York, she earned two degrees from The University of Georgia and worked for The Atlanta Journal-Constitution. She currently works as a freelance data research reporter for The Marshall Project and as a stringer for The New York Times' metro desk in New York City. Upon graduation, she will be joining The Associated Press.

Eduardo Salazar Uribe is a Venezuelan journalist with a postgraduate degree in international communications from a Spanish institution. He has worked as a television reporter and producer for Euronews, RNW, Venevisión, and Vice News. He's also contributed to outlets including El Nacional, Caracol Noticias, and Deutsche Welle. He is currently pursuing a master's degree in journalism at the Craig Newmark Graduate School of Journalism at CUNY with a double concentration in bilingual / Latino communities and international reporting. He works as a stringer for The New York Times and is a reporter and translator for the Mott Haven Herald.

Mayara Teixeira is a Brazilian journalist with a passion for covering human rights stories. With seven years of experience at Rede Globo, the largest media company in Latin America, she has reported on global issues including the consequences of Cyclone Idai in Mozambique and the vote for the legalization of abortion in the Argentine Senate. Her reporting on police violence in São Paulo earned her the Vladimir Herzog Award for Amnesty and Human Rights. Most recently, she was awarded a full scholarship to pursue a specialization in documentary at Columbia University's Graduate School of Journalism, where she will graduate in August 2023.

MEET THE 2023 JOURNALISM TEACHING AWARD WINNER

Thomas Wentworth, a journalism teacher and newspaper adviser at Brooklyn Technical High School, is the 2023 recipient of the Deadline Club's Robert Greenman Award for Excellence in High School Journalism Teaching and Advising. The award is named in honor of journalism educator and board member of the Deadline Club, Robert Greenman, who died in 2018.

Wentworth, who grew up in a newspaper family in Washington, D.C., advises the student newspaper, The Survey, which he has grown from a once-a-week after-school club to a daily class. A seven-year veteran of the New York public school system, including six at Brooklyn Tech, he previously worked in documentary film-making for CBS News, National Geographic and A&E Discovery. He also has written for the San Francisco Bay Guardian.

The award presented to him at tonight's dinner is the 17th presented by the Deadline Club to a high school journalism educator.

ABOUT THE DEADLINE CLUB

Welcome to the annual Awards Dinner of the Deadline Club, the New York City Chapter of the Society of Professional Journalists. Our members include journalists working in newspapers, magazines, news services, multimedia, digital production, television and radio, as well as retired journalists and journalism educators.

The Society of Professional Journalists was founded at DePauw University in Indiana in 1909. Today, the mission of SPJ and its chapters is multifold. It is to foster a climate of press freedom, to defend the First Amendment guarantees of freedom of speech and of the press and to stimulate high standards and ethical behavior in the practice of journalism.

Founded in 1925, the Deadline Club has been serving the New York City journalism community for 98 years. Through the annual competition and dinner, the club recognizes the finest journalistic work from media companies in the New York area.

Tonight's winners, selected from 550 entries, are presented with the club's well-known "Rubes," distinctive statuettes designed by the late Rube Goldberg. The Deadline Club will also award $15,000 in scholarships to six talented journalism students.

The Deadline Club holds panel discussions, workshops, career development and social events for our members throughout the year. The club also maintains the New York Journalism Hall of Fame and has inducted 118 members since founding the tradition at the club's golden anniversary celebration in 1975.

Deadline Club members have full access to the Salmagundi Club, a historic arts center located at 47 Fifth Ave. in Greenwich Village. Club members have use of its restaurant and bar, billiard room, library, parlor and common areas with complimentary Wi-Fi.

To learn more or to join the Deadline Club, visit deadlineclub.org.

ABOUT OUR VENUE

After eight consecutive years at the Waldorf Astoria, the club needed to find a new venue in 2017 following the closure and renovation of the hotel by new ownership. The club had its dinners off and on at the legendary New York landmark since it first moved the annual event from a Third Avenue beer hall to the Waldorf's Astor Gallery in 1949.

Since 2017, the Club has been fortunate to be hosted by the Harvard Club of New York City, an exclusive members-only venue. Designed by the prominent architecture firm McKim, Mead and White, the Harvard Club was one of the first buildings to be named a New York City landmark and is listed on the National Register of Historic Places. The same architects also designed Beaux-Arts structures like the razed Madison Square Garden of 1890, the former Pennsylvania Station, the Brooklyn Museum, the Columbia University campus and the Boston Public Library.

Harvard Hall, where the awards banquet takes place, was designed by Charles F. McKim, a Harvard alumnus, and completed in 1905. The hall is 90 feet long, 36 feet wide and a full three stories high. It is considered one of McKim's masterpieces.
